God's Universal Laws

The Law of Manifestation

This law takes our understanding of phenomena a giant step forward and teaches us that there is no difference between cause and effect – our thoughts are things. Cause and effect are in fact one and the same. At first this might be difficult to understand, but if you remove the time factor, you will understand why this is true. Without time, which is the process in all things, you will see that cause and effect are identical. And a little more thought will reveal to you that they must be identical! Nothing else is possible. Therefore, we now see that thoughts are things. This is the Law of Manifestation. This Law also tells us that since thoughts are things, the reverse must also be true; in other words, things must also be thoughts. This means you can discover the nature of the cause by considering the effect, since they are one and the same. Radish seeds always produce radishes. They never produce strawberries. The whole radish plant is inherent in the seed. The only difference between the seed and the fully grown plant is the time factor.<sup>41</sup>

How does it happen? What are the mechanics of creation? How does the unmanifest become the manifest? Einstein's theory of relativity ( $E=MC^2$ ) demonstrates that energy and mass are identical and interchangeable. The very wise tell us that thought is the mechanism of creation—the bridge between energy and mass, between the unmanifest and the manifest.<sup>42</sup>

Now what in fact is thought? Thought is intention and attention. Thought organizes energy and information. In other words, thought organizes the field of infinite energy, which—without thought—is just unlimited potential. You could say that thought does not put anything into the field; rather it takes something out of the field—by limiting and defining the field. Without thought, this field is simply pure potentiality. It is thought—or intention and attention—that organizes and makes manifest creation pop out of the unmanifest (the field of infinite energy).<sup>43</sup>

In order to fully utilize this Law for our benefit we must begin to manage our thoughts. To do so requires us to do a major soul search of our past to determine what thoughts we have deeply buried in our mind which controls our thoughts continuously. We must remove all the negative conditions of life experiences which we have stored deep within this mind of ours. Nothing of the enlightenment process can begin without first forgiving ourselves and others of all the wrong doings that we or they have made against each other.

Manifestation can happen immediately when we are physical, emotionally, and mentally aligned with God. God tells us that everything we need and everything He wants to give to us is already there in our storehouse. The issue is we do not know how to access. It is through being in alignment with Christ that we can manifest His storehouse into our lives immediately.
